Socratic Seminar Reflection

Name: Dana Kowalski

Before the seminar: what is your answer to the question?

I think breaking a rule is okay if the rule is unfair, because rules should protect people not hurt them.

After the seminar: has your thinking changed?

I still think unfair rules can be broken but Priya made me see that you should try to change the rule first.

Notes on how the discussion went:

Most people talked at the start. A few kids stayed quiet.

Socratic Seminar Reflection

Name: Priya Raman

Before the seminar: what is your answer to the question?

Rules are there to keep everyone safe so you should almost never break them.

After the seminar: has your thinking changed?

Now I think intent matters. Someone who breaks a rule to help another person is different.

Notes on how the discussion went:

The talk got better when we used the text as evidence.

Socratic Seminar Reflection

Name: Marcus Delgado

Before the seminar: what is your answer to the question?

It depends on why you break the rule. If you are trying to help someone it can be okay.

After the seminar: has your thinking changed?

My idea did not change. Intent matters most and Dana and Priya both said something like that.

Notes on how the discussion went:

We went off topic one time but came back.

Socratic Seminar Reflection

Name: Lena Hoffmann

Before the seminar: what is your answer to the question?

I do not think you should break rules because then nobody knows what to expect.

After the seminar: has your thinking changed?

I changed my mind a little. Some rules protect people so breaking them can be right.

Notes on how the discussion went:

Everyone listened to each other, it was calm.

Socratic Seminar Reflection

Name: Tomas Okafor

Before the seminar: what is your answer to the question?

Rules protect people. Breaking them is wrong unless the rule is hurting someone.

After the seminar: has your thinking changed?

I agree with Marcus that intent matters. I would still try to change the rule the right way first.

Notes on how the discussion went:

Two people did most of the talking.

Socratic Seminar Reflection

Name: Jordan Whitfield

Before the seminar: what is your answer to the question?

I think it is fine to break a rule if nobody gets hurt and it is fair.

After the seminar: has your thinking changed?

Same as before. Fairness is the main thing for me.

Notes on how the discussion went:

It was fun. I wish we had more time.